

“The Mixed-up Chameleon”

- by Eric Carle

The children listened to the story of “The Mixed-up Chameleon”. As the chameleon visited a zoo, the children learned the English names of animals living there. The chameleon’s wish was to be a little bit of every animal. His wish came true, so he became very mixed-up.

The children also had the chance to play one of the animals whilst wearing a costume. Some children told the story again in English and others in German.

In the end, we learned that everyone, human and animal, is special. Colour, shape and size show what makes each animal unique. So, the mixed-up chameleon wished that he could become himself again. And the wish came true.
